A more reckless attempt has seldom been

Betwee proceeding to present the historical d Congressional Caucus system was aban broad terms he averred that the rule had been "broken to ploces" by the Convention that nominated Mr. Douglas; but he was careful not to specify in what particular or by what act that was done. on the 1st of May, 1850, requiring the President of the Convention not to declare any person nominated unless he received two-thirds of all the votes the full Convenon was catitled to east, Mr. Buchanan did ot mention it, or refer to it in any way. It it was in his mind at all, ho kuew that nothing was to be made by saying anything about it, because that resolution was bind-ing on the Convention only just as long as he Convention chose that it should be so t was a new rule, never before Introduced into any Democratic National Convention. It differed from, but did not in spirit destroy, the old "two-thirds rule," sines it required a lurger vote for a nomination than that rule did. It was not based on any previous usage of the party, but was the creature of that Convention, and might be repealed or disregarded by that Convention, without violating any party usage or obli-

It were easily shown, as it has any times been, that he received two-thirds f all the votes a full Convention was en itled to east; but that is not the matter now nder consideration. The question is—was he nominated in accordance with the usag of the party! Did he get the number of rotes required by the "Two-thirds Rule?" If my position is correct, that the Rule required only two-thirds of all the votes given then he was nominated in accordance with the usage of the party—otherwise not. Let ns, then, examine the Ruls and its history n each of the seven Democratio National onventions, held prior to this year.

Letter from Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Ang. 10, 1360 Gentlemen: Will you allow me a brief pace in your columns, to call the attention of the National Democrats of Kentucky to State. On last Monday we, the Douglas men of Kentucky, achieved the graudest ictory in the political history of this Commonwealth. We buried most effectually the hideous monster Disunion, and the care-ful observer of the overwhelming defeat administered to Clint. McClarty, will naturally ask how this Waterloo defeat was accomplished? I answer, it was accom-blished by the powerful influence of the ouisville Democrat. It is an easily ascertained fact, that wherever the Democrat was treely circulsted, Disunionism received its death blow and Combs got his largest majorities. I Irust that the Convention r work on streets to July 5, 1860

THE BRECKINGINGE WARRIORS .- The Herald of Saturday contains a "Military Call," addressed to the "Soldiers of the late Mexican War," commencing with a "whereas," and going ou to state that the country is "in the midst of a perilous political crisis." This call is signed by eight gentlemen who were in that war, and who are no men who were in that war, and who are not able to perceive how any of their fellow-soldiers can satisfy the demands of patriotisus otherwise than by voting for Mr. Breckinridge The "call" has promptly elicited a communication, published in another column of the News, signed by eleven officers and soldiers of the same war, who announce their vigorous support of Judge Dougles.

Douglas. We have forgotten whether it was Napo leon or his great antagonist, Wellington, 'l'rovidence favors the heaviest battalions but we believe in the truth of the maxim, and as the Douglas squadron exceeds the Breckinridge by three files, we feel confident that the former, with faces to foe, and as the slogan, will slaughter their opponents and leave the country perfectly safe.

N. I. News.

Mr. lleenan is now enjoying himself at Newport with the case and abundon of the ablest habitue. A little sea breeze, occan bathing, drives on the beach, fishing and ten pins will bring him into fine condition rumor, by the way, that a proposal has been made to the directors of the tireat Eastern (not to the "providor," Mr. Cox,) to convey passengers from Hammond street to the wharf nearest Jones' Wood, and after the 'show" to land them again at Hammond street. The price is to be moderate, and a big thing is supposed to be in it. We have also heard that an excursion train is to be
